the town, consisting of a centre and two wings; in one of the latter is a chapel, in the other a school-house for girls, who are carefully and gratuitously instructed by the ladies of the establishment. The environs of Fermoy abound with charming scenery, and numerous villas and mansions of the opulent. The market is held on Saturday. Fairs June 21st, August 20th, and November

FERMOY,

WITH THE PARISHES OF CLONDULANE, LITTER AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

FERMOY, a market and post town and parish, in the barony of Clondons and Clongibbons, county of Cork, is 134 miles s. w. from Dublin, 38 s. e. from Limerick, and 23 n. e. from Cork; finely situated on the Blackwater river, in the centre of an extensive and exceedingly fertile agricultural district. This place is said to have originated in the foundation of a Cistercian abbey by the family of the Roches, in the beginning of the twelfth century. In 1796, when the late John Anderson became its possessor, by purchase, it consisted of only a few mud cabins and the ruins of the old abbey; but in a few years, by the exertions of its enterprising and spirited owner, it became not only one of the prettiest inland towns in Ireland, but, during his proprietorship, one of considerable manufacture—and industry, comfort and respectability was soon apparent.
In consequence of the unfortunate failure of Mr. Anderson's bank, the place subsequently became the property of Sir Robt. Abercromby, Bart. who is highly respected as a landlord, albeit, it is to be regretted, a non-resident.
The improvements in the town, however, progress satisfactorily under the intelligent superintendence of Sir Robert's agent, Matthias Hendley, Esq. Several handsome houses have been recently built—two in the Elizabethan style of architecture, in Abercromby-place, are really elegant; and near the same site Frederick Bell, Esq. has erected a beautiful residence. The site, too, of the extensive brewery of Messrs. Perrott & Co.
has, by the happy means of the total abstinence movement, been appropriated to the erection of sober and comfortable dwellings, shops, and warehouses. The bridge of seventeen arches, connecting the northern and southern portions of the town, is a noble structure.
The prospect of a railway to Middleton has suspended the project of making the Blackwater navigable to the town. The staple trade of Fermoy is in corn and butter, of which considerable quantities are sent off. There are three flour mills and several nursery grounds in the neighbourhood; those belonging to Mr. Baylor, called the 'Woodbine Nursery,' and that of Mr. Reali, Bally-arthur, and of Mr. Fitzgerald, Barrack hill, merit especial notice. The National Bank of Ireland and the Provincial Bank have branches here, and there is a savings' bank and a loan fund. The government of the town is confided chiefly to the county and resident magistracy.

General sessions of the peace are held twice a year, and petty sessions once a fortnight, in the court-house, a well arranged building, at the east end of the town. The barracks are remarkably commodious; a portion of the new barrack has been converted into a workhouse.

There are four edifices for public worship, namely, the church of the establishment, erected in 1802; the Roman Catholic chapel in 1811; the Methodist chapel in 1820, and that for Presbyterians in 1837. The church is rather an elegant structure, with a square tower, formerly surmounted by a spire, which, becoming insecure, was taken down some years since, but is about to be replaced by subscription. The late Mr. Anderson gave the site for this church, and nearly £3,000. towards its erection. The Roman Catholic chapel is likewise a handsome building, lately enlarged and embellished.
The Methodist and Presbyterian chapels are small but neat buildings. The late Rev. Dr. William Adair endowed a school for teaching the useful branches of education; the present master has ably conducted this establishment for more than twenty years; there is also a school for females attached, superintended by the ladies of the town. There are national and infants schools and several private academies. A convent for nuns of the order of Presentation has been built in a
