RATHKEALE,

A MARKET town and parish, in the barony of Lower Connello, county of Limerick, is 120 miles s. w. from Dublin, 53 s. n. w. from Cork, and 17 s. w. by w. from Limerick; situated between the last named town and Newcastle, on the banks of the river Deel. It was formerly a corporate town, and of more importance than it now is, at least in the annals of turbulence and war, having obstinately and successfully resisted various assaults of the English army during the rebellion, which desolated this island in the reign of Elizabeth. At a very early age a priory for Augustinian canons, under the invocation of the Virgin Mary, was founded here by a person of the name of Harvey. The town consists principally of one long and wide street, extending from east to west, with some respectable houses and a few good shops. The court-house, in the Square, is a neat stone building, and the bridewell, a substantial one, beneath it. Petty sessions are held every alternate Thursday, and quarter sessions in January, April, July, and October. Agriculture is the prevailing occupation of the inhabitants: the trade of the town is entirely of a character connected therewith, corn being the principal, but even that comparatively trifling; there are two flour mills, one of which is on a large scale. The places of worship are the established church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, erected upon an acclivity at the west end of the town, and a Roman Catholic chapel, in Thomas-street, both handsome structures: the former has a lofty embattled tower with crocketed pinnacles. The surrounding country is highly interesting, presenting a number of rich and varied prospects, embellished with flourishing plantations and many seats of the gentry. A prominent object in the landscape is Matras or Matrix Castle, which stands about a mile from the town, in a fine situation, on the banks of the Deel, commanding extensive views of the country, including the Shannon river, and the Clare and Tipperary mountains. It was besieged by Cromwell, but received little injury at his hands, and within these few years it has been out in a state of complete repair. The markets, which are well supplied, are held on Thursday and Saturday. Fairs January 6th, February 7th, March 10th, April 4th, June 19th, July 17th, August 25th, September 13th, October 14th, and November 18th. The population of the parish, in 1841, was 8,293, inclusive of 4,201 inhabitants of the town.

POST OFFICE, Main street, John Hammond, Post Master.—Letters from all parts of IRELAND and ENGLAND arrive (from DUBLIN) every forenoon at eleven, and are despatched every afternoon at twenty minutes past one.
