SWORDS AND MALAHIDE.

SWORDS, a small post town and parish, in the barony of Nethercross, county of Dublin, is 9 miles s. of that city, situated on the steep banks of a small but rapid stream, which discharges itself into the inner extremity of the creek or pill of Malahide. This creek, which comes within a mile of the town, is navigable for boats at high water. The place is one of considerable antiquity, is said to have been the seat of the first Irish parliament, and was a borough which returned two representatives, prior to the Union. Within the parish are the ruins of a castle, once of great magnitude and strength, and a tower, said to be of Danish construction. The town, which consists chiefly of one wide street, is seated in a very pleasant neighbourhood, which is inhabited by many opulent families. The places of worship are the parish church, rather a handsome structure, and a Roman Catholic chapel; and the charitable institutions comprise a large free school for children of both sexes, an infants' school, and a dispensary. Fairs, March 17th and May 9th. Population of the town, in 1841, 2,788.

MALAHIDE is a post village, in the parish of its name, barony of Coolock, county of Dublin, about two miles from Swords, on the line of the Dublin and Drogheda railway, for which it is a station. This very pleasant village is situated on a shallow inlet of the Irish sea, between Lambay Island to the north, and Ireland's Eye and the celebrated promontory of Howth to the south. It is of a sequestered character, and presents considerable attractions to visitors during the bathing season, having good inns, several handsome cottages, and beautiful scenery. Malahide Castle, the seat of Earl Talbot, situated within a pleasant distance from the village, is a fine building, erected in the reign of Henry II. Contiguous to the castle are the remains of the ancient church, for ages the place of sepulture of the Talbot family; and it contains a decorated altar tomb to some of the former members. With the exception of that derived from the prolific oyster-beds, which supply the Dublin markets, there is no trade of consequence existing here. The places of worship are the parish church and a Roman Catholic chapel. The parish contains 1,339 inhabitants, and the town about a moiety of that number.

POST OFFICE, Swords, James Sandford, Post Master.—Letters from DUBLIN and various parts by first mail arrive (from MALAHIDE by mail cart) every morning at half-past eight, and are despatched thereto every afternoon at four.—Letters by second mail arrive (from MALAHIDE by foot post) every night at ten, and are despatched (by the same conveyance) every evening at half-past six.

POST OFFICE, MALAHIDE, Elizabeth Batty, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from DUBLIN) every morning at twenty minutes past nine and evening at thirty-five minutes past eight, and are despatched every morning at thirty-five minutes past three and afternoon at four.

TAGHMION

IS a small market town and parish, in the barony of Skelmallock, county of Wexford, 9 miles w. from Wexford, and 15 e. from New Ross; situated on the main road between the two towns. Its name is derived from Theugh Munno, 'the House of Munno,' from Saint Munno who, in the sixth century, founded here an Augustinian monastery. This place, previous to the Union, returned two members to parliament; its chief consequence now is derived from the butter trade, at the market for which the merchants of Wexford attend here, in considerable numbers, twice a week during the season, which continues about seven months in the year. No fewer than eighteen fairs are held annually for this and other purposes. There are few inland traders that transact more business than Mr. Bolger of this town.

POST OFFICE, Ellen Corish, Post Mistress.—Letters from DUBLIN arrive every morning at ten, and are despatched every afternoon at one.—Letters from WATERFORD and NEW ROSS arrive every morning at half-past ten, and are despatched every afternoon at half-past one.—Letters from BANSOW arrive every morning at ten, and are despatched every forenoon at eleven.

THOMASTOWN.

AN inconsiderable market town and parish, in the barony of Gowran, county of Kilkenny, is 74 miles s. by w. from Dublin, and 10 s. e. from Kilkenny, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Nore, which, after uniting its waters with those of the Barrow, falls into Waterford harbour. The town, which consists of three streets of tolerable width and well paved, returned, previous to the Union, two members to the Irish parliament. The scenery is very beautiful in the vicinity of the town, and many elegant seats, belonging to the gentry, ornament the face of the country. There are no manufactures carried on, but a considerable trade exists in grain, and there are two very extensive corn mills. A substantial gaol and convenient court-house have been erected; in the latter general sessions are held four times a year, and petty sessions every fortnight. The parish church is a neat stone structure, with a tower and one bell; and the Catholic chapel is a handsome building, having similar appendages, and at the time it was built said to be the only one in Ireland with a tower. A large national school, erected sometime ago by the late Earl of Carrick, and a dispensary, are the principal charitable institutions. The market days are Monday and Friday. Fairs March 17th, May 25th, and September 15th. The population of the town, as taken in 1841, is 2,318.

POST OFFICE, Alicia Duke, Post Mistress.—Letters from DUBLIN and the NORTH, also from ENGLAND, arrive every morning at a quarter before five, and are despatched every evening at a quarter before seven.—Letters from NEW ROSS arrive every evening at a quarter before seven, and are despatched every morning at a quarter before five.
