

some modern edifice, in the later English style, ornamented with minarets. It was completed in 1827, at an expense of more than £11,000. It is situated on the same side of the river as the church, and furnishes a great ornament to that locality. The county gaol, a dispensary, a fever hospital, and a union workhouse, are the other principal public establishments. The workhouse has accommodation for twelve hundred inmates; in February, 1845, the number of recipients
