CLIFDEN

IS a sea-port and market town, in the parish of Omev, barony of Ballynahinch, county of Galway, 178 miles w. from Dublin, and 50 w. by n. from Galway, situated on an eminence, on the shore of a winding estuary, that empties itself into Ardhear, or Clifden harbour, on the western coast. It is of modern origin, having contained in 1815 only one house, at which time the late John D'Arcy, Esq. settled here, through whose exertions more than three hundred dwellings have since been erected. It is inhabited principally by intelligent shopkeepers and traders, and there are two excellent hotels, Carr's and Hart's, the former of which has recently undergone great improvement, and both are admirably arranged either for the comfort of families or commercial gentlemen. The scenery round Clifden being composed of mountain, rock, and flood, perhaps equals, if not surpasses in rude grandeur, any other that Ireland exhibits. From any of the neighbouring hills the eye may range over the broad surface of the Atlantic on the one side, and over an interminable series of mountains overtopping each other, in Alpine grandeur, on the other. No tourist, indeed, can visit this locality without enjoying unalloyed gratification mingled with wonder. The soil is generally of a boggy nature from three to four feet deep; but a considerable portion of it has been brought into cultivation by the late John D'Arcy, Esq. and it now produces very fine grain—oats in particular, some of which obtain the best market price. The Clifden harbour is considered, by Mackenzie, one of the safest on the western coast, and might, with comparatively little labour, be rendered capable of admitting vessels of any class. The quay, commenced by Mr. Nimmo, which is still incomplete, is capable of admitting vessels of two hundred tons burden. The imports comprise pitch, tar, hemp, salt, groceries, iron, and timber; the exports, corn and fish. There is an excellent salmon fishery in the Ardhear, and vast quantities of fish are taken on the coast. Two copper mines are in the neighbourhood, but not at present worked; also quarries of green and white marble, which are wrought only on a small scale. The government of the town is vested in the magistrates, who hold a petty session once a fortnight, and general sessions of the peace for the district twice a year.

The places of worship are a church of the establishment, a beautiful building, and a commodious Roman Catholic chapel, also a monastery of the order of Saint Francis. The other public buildings and institutions are a handsome new stone court-house, a bridewell, the union workhouse, a good building on an extensive scale, a constabulary barrack, a dispensary, a national school, and a loan fund. On the summit of one of the hills, visible from any part of the town, has been erected a monument, by the contributions of the inhabitants, to perpetuate the memory of the late John D'Arcy, Esq. the founder of the town. Near to the town stands Clifden Castle, a noble structure of Gothic style, the property and residence of Hyacinth D'Arcy, Esq. the proprietor of the district. The grounds are tastefully laid out and command a fine view of the ocean. There are several other seats in the neighbourhood, among which are 'Glen Owen,' that of Captain William Syer; 'Enislamin,' of John Lambert, Esq.; 'Ardhear House,' Samuel Jones, Esq.; and 'Bay View,' Anthony Morris, Esq. The market is on Saturday. Fairs June 25th, September 1st, October 15th, and December 17th. The parish of Omev contained, in 1811, 7,953 inhabitants, and the town of Clifden 1,509 of that number.

IS a small market and post town, in the parish of Kilcoleman, in the barony of its name, and county of Mayo, about 140 miles w. of Dublin, 13 s. e. of Castlebar, and about 6 n. e. of Hollymount; situated on the road from Ballinrobe to Castlereah. It presents but few attractions to the stranger, the houses generally being but rudely built, and many even of those going to decay. In a neat court-house petty sessions are held every Thursday, a manor court every third month, and general sessions twice a year. The parish church of Kilcoleman is a remarkably neat structure, with a beautiful tower and lofty spire. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of the Bishop of Tuam; there is also a Roman Catholic chapel. The charities consist of a dispensary lately established, and a parochial and national schools. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs January 27th, March 11th, May 24th, June 22nd, Sept. 27th, and Nov. 23d. Population, in 1841, 2,256.
