COLLOONEY AND BALLY SADARE.

COLLOONEY is a small market and post town, in that part of Ballysadare parish which is in the barony of Tirerrill, county of Sligo, 12 1/2 miles N.W. from Dublin, 7 1/2 N. from Ballymote, and 6 1/2 S. from Sligo, situated on the banks of a stream which, rapidly flowing out of Lough Arrow, forms, in its course, several interesting falls, and propels the machinery of some meal and flour mills—of these, Mr. Sim's and Messrs. Madden & Co.'s mills are upon an extensive scale. These works, with some bleaching carried on by Mr. Kelly, at Camphill, are the principal commercial establishments. The civil affairs of the town are superintended by the local magistrates, who meet in petty sessions once a fortnight. The Protestant Church of Saint Paul is a handsome Gothic structure, with a lofty spire, furnished with a bell and clock, and the interior has the addition of a fine-toned organ. The Roman Catholic chapel is also ornamental to the town, and commodious within. There are schools for children of both sexes, under the National Board of Education and the Church Education Society, and a dispensary, supported in the usual way. In 1798, seven hundred French landed at Killala, and proceeding to this town, encamped on the site of the present bleach-works. Shortly after, the Limerick militia and a few of the yeomanry arrived, when a battle ensued, and the British troops were obliged to retreat with the loss of several killed and wounded; but the enemy subsequently surrendered at Ballinamuck. The town enjoys a charter for holding four fairs in the year and a market on Thursday, but neither market or fairs are attended. The population of the town, as taken in 1841, is 651.

BALLY SADARE is a small village and parish, partly in the barony of Loney, but chiefly in that of Tirerrill, seated on the same stream as Collooney (which is crossed, at this place, by a stone bridge of seven arches), and on the mail road between Collooney and Sligo about a mile from the former place. There are some lead mines in the neighbourhood which are not at present worked. Here, as in Collooney, are considerable corn mills, and a large quantity of meal is shipped for Glasgow, Liverpool, &c. at a small bay which comes to within a short distance of the village. A little below it is a waterfall worthy of notice. A monastery was founded here, by Saint Fechin, in the middle of the seventh century, which was destroyed by fire in the twelfth. A portion of the walls still remain, which are covered with ivy, and surround a place of interment. A chapel of ease to the parish church is the only place of worship. The village contained, in 1841, 869 inhabitants.

DROMAHAIRE,

A SMALL market and post town, in the parish of Drumlease, barony of its name, county of Leitrim, 31 miles N. by W. from Carrick-on-Shannon, 10 S.E. from Sligo, and 9 S.W. from Manor-Hamilton; is beautifully situated on the side of the river Bonade, which flows into Lough Gill, and in the midst of rugged but interesting scenery. It is the property of George Lane Fox, Esq. who has contributed greatly to the improvement of the place by the formation of new roads to a great extent, and the erection of a commodious market-house. The trade in grain is very considerable; and an extensive corn and flour mill has been recently built. By means of a steam-boat, which plys between this town and Sligo, and of a car in connection with the boat, which runs from here to Carrick-on-

Shannon, it is likely to become the main pass between these places. The government of the town is vested in the magistrates, who hold petty sessions once a fortnight. There is a constabulary barrack here, and it is the residence of the sub-inspector. The charitable institutions are a dispensary, towards the support of which Mr. Fox subscribes £50. per annum; and a free school, supported by the same benevolent gentleman. The only place of worship is the parish church, a neat building, with a square tower, pleasantly seated on a gentle eminence contiguous to the town. A Roman Catholic chapel is situated at Cornalaughta, a distance of about a mile and a half from the town. The market is on Thursday. Fairs are held on the 13th of each month, all toll free. Population of the town, 348.

POST OFFICE, Mary Lee, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from COLLOONEY) every afternoon at a quarter past one, and are despatched thereto every morning at a quarter past seven.

DRUMSNA AND JAMESTOWN.

DRUMSNA is a small market and post town, in the parish of Annaduff, barony and county of Leitrim, 92 miles W.N.W. from Dublin, 18 N. by W. from Longford, 6 W. from Mohill, and 4 S. by E. from Carrick-on-Shannon; pleasantly seated on the banks of the river Shannon, over which is a fine old bridge of seven arches. The town, which has a respectable appearance, is the residence of several private gentlemen, and the domains of Sir Gilbert King, Bart. and of Rear-Admiral Wm. C. Rowley, ornament its vicinage. There is a considerable corn trade carried on, and large quantities are taken from hence by the Dublin merchants. The civil affairs of the town are regulated by the magistrates, who hold a petty session once a fortnight, in the sessions house, a small building.

The parish church of Annaduff, situated about a mile from the town, is a neat edifice, with a square tower; attached is a spacious burying-ground. The church contains a remarkably neat monument to the memory of the Rev. John Haudcock, late rector of the parish, distinguished for his learning and piety, and erected by his clerical brethren as a testimony of the high esteem in which they held him. There is another memorial to Admiral Sir Josias Rowley, with a representation of a ship in full sail. The Roman Catholic chapel, situated about two miles and a half from the town, is a new and spacious structure; another, at a more convenient distance, is in course of erection. There is a school under the National Board; another in connexion with the Ladies' Hibernian Society, of London (of which Mrs. Waldron is the visiter); another in connexion with the Church Education Society of Ireland, and a Sunday school, patronized by Sir Gilbert and Lady King. A dispensary, but indifferently supported, and a loan fund, are the other institutions. The market, entitled to be held on Tuesdays, is not attended. Fairs May 20th, June 22nd, August 25th, and December 13th. Population 516.

JAMESTOWN is a small market town (formerly a parliamentary borough), in the parish of Kiltoghra, barony and county of Leitrim, situated between Drumsna and Carrick-on-Shannon, one mile from the former and two and a half from the latter place. The town was originally fortified to command the ford of the river Shannon, and the remains of the walls and a fine arched gateway, at the south entrance, are still to be seen. Here are also the remains of an old castle, said to have been built by Sir Charles Coote, in the year 1623, and which sustained various assaults in the contentions of 1641 and 1689. A little to the north of the town the Shannon is crossed by a long bridge, which will be superseded by a new one, now erecting, of five arches, a few yards higher up the river than the present one. Mr. Renton is the engineer, and Messrs. Jeffs the contractors. The first stone was laid on the 15th January, 1845, by Lieut.-Colonel Harry Jones, second commissioner of the Shannon Board. The only place of worship in the town is a Roman Catholic chapel, a neat and commodious edifice, lately enlarged at the sole expense of Francis O'Beirne, Esq. The altar is embellished with a beautiful painting of 'the Crucifixion,' and there are several other pictures of great merit. Connected with the chapel is a very good house, also the gift of Mr. O'Beirne, occupied by the Very Rev. Dr. Stevin, vicar general of the parish. The market is held on Saturday; and there is a charter for holding four fairs in the year, but they are not attended. In 1841, the population was 315.
