very extensive distillery, belonging to Mr. Levingston; branches of the Bank of Ireland, and of the National Bank; several assurance agencies; a linen factory of Messrs. Pinkerton and Thompson; bleach works of Mr. Macdonnell; two flour mills, and the like number of salt works and principal inns, are the other chief business establishments. Walsh's Hotel, in Castlebar-street, is a very admirably conducted house. The general sessions of the peace are held here in April and October, petty sessions every Thursday, and a seneschal court for the recovery of debts under £20. once a month. These courts are held in the court-house, a neat, substantial stone building, to which a small bride-well is attached.

The church, a small neat structure, stands in the domain of the nobleman before named; and on the Mall is a spacious Roman Catholic chapel, in the Gothic style, erected by subscription in 1813. The Wesleyan Methodists have also a chapel at this spot; and the Presbyterians, and a sect calling themselves 'Darby-ites,' have places of worship—the latter in the market-house. A neat chapel belongs to the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy established here; and the exemplary sisterhood superintend the instruction of a considerable number of poor girls in a school connected with the convent. A linen-hall is situated opposite to the Catholic chapel, and a dispensary in the locality of the church—the latter is a neat building, erected by the marquess, who munificently contributes fifty guineas annually towards its support. In 1844 this valuable institution administered relief to upwards of 7,400 poor, of whom a large number were visited at their own dwellings by the indefatigable medical attendant. The neighbourhood of Westport is the residence of many respectable families, and some of the mansions are placed in situations of great beauty, commanding extensive interesting views and scenery of great variety. The seats and villas most likely to arrest the attention are the following:—Rosbeg House, Mountain View, Cherry Cottage, Altamont Villa, Trafalgar Park, Cloona Lodge, Murrisk Abbey, Prospect, Mount Browne, Woodville, and Greenhills. The market, a well attended one for linen, corn, provisions, &c. is held on Thursday. Fairs, January 1st, May 22nd, August 6th, and November 1st. The parish of Oughaval contained, according to the returns made in 1841, 13,441 inhabitants, and the town (including the Quay portion 547) 4,912 of that number.

WESTPORT,

AN important and thriving sea-port and market town, in the parish of Oughaval, county of Mayo, 156 miles w. from Dublin, 28 s. by w. from Ballina, 10 s.w. from Castlebar, and about 7 s. from Newport; situated at the south-eastern extremity of Clew bay, and at the mouth of a small river, which falls into that part of it forming the harbour of Westport—a name derived from its situation on the western coast. The town, which is of modern date, consists of three principal streets and a Mall of large and handsome houses, on both sides of the river, the banks of which are planted with trees and afford a pleasant promenade. The approach from Castlebar is singularly beautiful, being enriched with the well-planted domain of the Marquess of Sligo (who is proprietor of the town), and commanding a fine view of Clew bay, studded with picturesque islands, and the lofty mountains of Nephin, Achill, Enis, and Croagh-Patrick—the latter mighty eminence celebrated as the annual resort of penitents. The trade of the port, which is comparatively of recent origin, has been progressively increasing for some years past, until it has attained great importance. The exports comprise large quantities of grain—principally oats, together with oatmeal and flour. The imports consist of timber, foreign wheat, tobacco, wines, spirits, tea, sugar, and various goods of British production. In 1836, when the bonding system was introduced into this port, and which imparted a powerful impetus to its trade, the duties on the goods imported for bonding are not less than £14,304. The stores of Macdonnell, Esq. A
