

NEWMARKET.

A MARKET town, in the parish of Clonfert, barony of Ballyharry, county of Cork, is 155 miles S.W. from Dublin, 38 S.W. from Cork, and about five S.W. from Kanturk; situated near the north-western boundary of the county, on a small stream which falls into the river Duhna, a little below the town. The ancient name of this place was Ahasane, or 'the place of the ford,' from its situation near a ford, now superseded by a neat bridge, at the entrance of the town. Its present name is derived from the establishment of its market, granted to the Aldworth family by James I. It consists principally of two streets intersecting each other, and contiguous to the town is its principal ornament, Newmarket House, the elegant mansion of Richard Oliver Aldworth, Esq. the lord of the manor. The trade of the place is almost limited to shopkeeping. Petty sessions are held every alternate Friday, in a new court-house, a stone building, beneath which the market is held.

POST OFFICE, Main street, Eugene Martney, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive by (foot post from KANTURK) every afternoon at five, and are despatched every morning at ten minutes before seven.

NEWPORT,

OR SAINT JOHN'S NEWPORT, is a small market town, in the parish of Kilyolane, barony of Ownney and Arra, county of Tipperary, 106 miles S.W. from Dublin, and 11 E. by S. from Limerick; pleasantly situated on the Mulkerna, a considerable stream that falls into the river Shannon, a little below the village of Ancotty. The town, which consists of one long street, is distinguished by no particular trade, the inhabitants chiefly depending on agriculture, and the shopkeepers on those so employed—assisted likewise by a neighbourhood of great respectability. Siamaltha, the seat of Lord Bloomfield, is a fine demesne, and the mansion an elegant and noble one. There are several other seats and handsome residences of the gentry around the town, the environs of which are very pleasant. Petty

PASSAGE AND MONKSTOWN.

PASSAGE, or WEST PASSAGE, is a sea-port and post town, partly in the parish of Monkstown, and partly in that of Marmulane (by which latter name it is also known), in the barony of Kerrycurryh, county of Cork, seven miles E.S.E. from that city; seated on the western shore of the estuary of the river Lee, opposite to Great Island. The parish of Marmulane is bounded on the west by the liberties of Cork city, and on the south by Monkstown. The town comprises one principal street extending along the shore for nearly a mile, with smaller streets and lanes diverging from it. The ferry to Great Island and Cove is at the eastern extremity of the town, and the thoroughfare, during the summer months, is very great. The St. George's Steam Packet Company have built a very handsome pier, where their packets can moor alongside in all weathers, and discharge their passengers and cargoes at any time of the tide. There is also a large dry dock, adjoining which are convenient quays, where the largest ships can lie. The intercourse between this place and Cove is kept up by the ferry; and numerous covered cars or jingles are constantly in requisition for the communication between Passage and Cork, besides steam and sailing boats continually during the day. The interesting character of the scenery, the varied and delightful views over the river, and the islands, and its general salubrity, have combined to render Passage highly desirable as a place of permanent residence, and attractive, during the summer, for the fine air and sea bathing. The principal business is ship-building, carried on extensively by Messrs. Brown, fir-
